

A man desired a horse, and, coming across a likely-looking beast, arranged to take him home on trial, where he put him in his stable with the other horses.

The newcomer looked around, and immediately chose a place next to the smartest beast in the stable.

When the man saw this, he immediately decided to acquire the horse.

The seller said, "Why, do you mean to say you have tested him already?"

"I don't want to put him through any more tests," replied the man, "I could see what sort of beast he is from the companion he chose for himself."
